A Drama of Modern Civilization

Master of MillionsBy GEORGE C. LORIMER

The author has written this story after years spent in collecting material, and out of a lifetime crowded with experience.

Thoroughly dramatic, and filled from cover to cover with vivid pictures of the fundamental passions of humanity.

A romantic story of love influenced as modern love is by business and society.

Broad minded sympathy with the human struggle for existence in our great cities, and merciless candor in disrobing the pretenses and hypocrisies of modern civilization, whether in the business world, religion, or conventional society.

GEORGE CLAUDE LORIMER.

The MASTER

LORIMER

This is not a problem novel, but simply a story that begins and ends with the one subject of eternal interest, human life. Dr. Lorimer writes as all great authors have written, with a pen dipped deep into the human heart. He writes as a man who knows real men and women, who knows that heroes have weak points, villains good ones, and that something of each enters into every one. It is a drama: from the wrong deed of a good man, comes first a predicament and then a small crisis followed by a larger, first one man and then many men and women are drawn into a mesh of circumstances that play on their loves, hates and ambitions till the wrong reaches fruition and the curtain falls.

NOTES IN SEASON.

JOHN LANE has just ready a collection of sea stories by Charles Protheroe, entitled "Life in the Mercantile Marine," which is specially commended for summer reading.

THE LOTHROP PUBLISHING COMPANY have just published a novel of unusual strength entitled "A Parish or Two," by H. G. McVickor, a well-known New York society man, and Percy Collins, the pseudonym of a well-known clergyman. The story is told in an exchange of letters between a club man and a clergyman.

LONGMANS, GREEN & COMPANY have nearly ready a drama in three acts, entitled "Mors et Victoria," the scene of which is laid in France shortly after the massacre of St. Bartholomew. Though the book is to appear without the author's name, it is said to be the work of a skilled and practiced writer, and that the drama, both as a poem and a play, is well worth serious attention.

HERBERT S. STONE & Co. will publish before long a story entitled "The Strange Adventures of Mr. Middleton," which is said to have a touch of Stevenson—the Stevenson of "The New Arabian Nights." They have just published a novelty in book making, namely, a "cinematograph edition" of "How to Play Golf," by H. J. Whigham. By the printing of small photographs in the margin a kind of moving picture is obtained which shows more accurately than anything else can do the correct positions in driving.

L. C. PAGE & Co. have just ready "The Golden Kingdom," by Andrew Balfour, a story of a treasure city hidden on the South African belt. Pigmies and poisoned arrows, a herd of lions, savage tribes of many sorts, mysterious charts, and tales of shipwreck provide it with wonders enough for at least six ordinary stories, even if its plot did not have three giants representing Great Britain, Holland, and the British colonies in Virginia, and a hero, an eighteenth century physician, who discovered that mosquitoes propagate malarial fever.

G. W. DILLINGHAM COMPANY will publish at once a work entitled "Out of Kishineff, the Duty of the Christians of America to the Russian Jew: an account of the Easter massacre of 1903, with reflections upon the relations between Jews and Christians, including a discussion of Russian responsibility and the opportunity and duty of the United States," by W. C. Stiles, B.D., author of "A Matter of Business," "The Master's Mission," etc. They have also in press what they call "a perfect scorcher," entitled "The Gilded Lady," being "the true story of a crime against the United States government as recorded by Henry V. Chardon, late of the secret service."

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS will publish next week a new volume of the International Critical Commentary, entitled "A Critical and Exegetical Commentary on Numbers," by Dr. George Buchanan Gray, Professor of Hebrew and Old Testament Exegesis in Mansfield College, Oxford, the most important work on the subject since Keil and Dillman, which enables the reader to look at and interpret the "Book of Numbers" from the new standpoints made possible by modern research and scholarship. They will publish later in the month an "Introduction to Classical Greek Literature," by Professor William Cranston Lawton, who covers the whole field of the classic portion of Greek literature from Homer to Lucian; also, a unique book for sportsmen, entitled "Our Feathered Game," by Dwight W. Huntington, whose object is to describe all the game birds of the United States and to tell where and how they may be shot, with chapters on guns and dogs and on game clubs and preserves.

"The course in plant physiology which I have given for the last five years at Stanford University has impressed upon me the need of a text-book which treats the subject less exhaustively than Pfeffer's Handbuch and more fully than Noll's section of the Bonn text-book. As I did not know of such a book in any language, I began to write my lectures. These lectures, after repeated working over, have finally taken this definite form. My intention has been to present the main facts of plant physiology and the saner hypotheses regarding them, striving to express safe views rather than to echo the most recent. . . ."

A tale of the Mormon settlement of Salt Lake City. In the central character of Joel Rae, the author has drawn a pathetic figure of a religious mystic, who comes by hard experience to see that the Mormon teachings are dire in their significance, especially upon women. His love for his adopted daughter and the child's growth into fair young womanhood, when she is won by a cowboy, are admirably depicted. Includes such dramatic scenes as that of the famous Mountain Meadows massacre, etc., while Brigham Young and other Mormon leaders are hit off to the life.

The Publishers' Weekly.

FOUNDED BY F. LEYPOLDT.

JUNE 13, 1903.

The editor does not hold himself responsible for the views expressed in contributed articles or communications. All matter, whether for the reading-matter columns or advertising pages, should reach this office not later than Wednesday noon, to insure insertion in the same week's issue.

Publishers are requested to furnish title-page proofs and advance information of books forthcoming, both for entry in the lists and for descriptive mention. An early copy of each book published should be forwarded, as it is of the utmost importance that the entries of books be made as promptly and as perfectly as possible. In many cases booksellers depend on the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY solely for their information. The Record of New Publications of the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY is the material of the "American Catalogue" and so forms the basis of trade bibliography in the United States.

"I hold every man a debtor to his profession, from the which, as men do of course seek to receive countenance and profit, so ought they of duty to endeavor themselves by way of amends to be a help and an ornament thereunto."—LORD BACON.

THE BOOKSELLERS' CONVENTION.

THE convention of the American Booksellers' Association at the Gilsey House this week, while it was unfortunately deprived of the co-operation of some of its leading members, who were detained on account of illness and other unavoidable causes, was fairly representative of the country, and was as enthusiastic and aggressive in temperament as any of its predecessors. The most important measures discussed, and upon which resolutions were drafted for recommendation to the American Publishers' Association, were the inclusion of fiction in the fully protected net list, and the extension of the time limit on protected books to two years. These steps in advance are the natural, in fact, logical, results of the success with which the reform has thus far been maintained. Inasmuch as it has been demonstrated that the published price can be maintained on copyrighted books in other departments of literature, it is but natural for the bookseller to claim that the same will hold good in the case of fiction.

The resolution looking to the extension of the time limit was the result of a long deliberation. While a large number present were in favor of protecting the price of a book during the life of a copyright, the majority were doubtful whether it would be wise to go to the extreme at this period of the existence of the Association.

A hopeful sign in the discussion of these two questions was the trend of the opinion expressed by the representatives of the book departments of the department stores, who were present. This was unanimously in favor of protecting fiction and extending the time limit. The co-operation in maintaining prices from the start of the reform movement by the department stores operating book departments was recognized by the Association in a resolution inviting those who have not yet become members to identify themselves with the Association and to share in all the benefits achieved.

The objection to the giving of trading stamps or other premiums with a net book is well timed. Any such scheme as this must be regarded as a discount, and therefore as an infringement of the rules governing the sale of net books. Dealers in other lines have so regarded the matter and taken steps to protect their goods against underselling of this kind. In fact, at the May meeting of the Manufacturers' Association of New York this subject was discussed, and resolutions passed favoring a movement that would secure legislation against the use of trading stamps. This will probably be unnecessary because we are confident that this innovation will not last. In the West, where the trading stamp scheme originated, we understand it is fast disappearing, experience having taught the small dealer that it is more of an annoyance than an advantage, besides adding to the cost of doing business more than is often realized in the way of profits.

Throughout the meetings the various problems that confront the retail bookseller and the difficulties that beset him were discussed in temperate language and in a common sense way. To one or two questions the members of the Association have evidently not yet given careful and philosophic thought, as is specially apparent in the framing of one of the resolutions, which resolution we shall take occasion to discuss in a future issue. We have no doubt that the wishes of the convention, when ratified by the members of the whole Association, will receive the consideration which they deserve from the American Publishers' Association.

THE TREES WE READ.

NINE successful novels recently published in the United States, so the Chicago Daily News figures out, "had a total sale of over 1,600,000 copies. Since the average weight of each book sold was probably twenty ounces, a little calculation will prove that these 1,600,000 books contained approximately 2,000,000 pounds of paper. A manufacturer of paper asserts that the average spruce tree yields a little less than half a cord of wood, which is equivalent to about 500 pounds of paper. In other words, these nine novels swept away 4000 trees, and they form but a small part of the fiction so eagerly read by the American public."

THIRD CONVENTION OF THE AMERICAN BOOKSELLERS' ASSOCIATION.

FIRST DAY'S SESSION.

THE third annual convention of the American Booksellers' Association held its first session in one of the parlors of the Gilsey House, Broadway and Twenty-ninth Street, New York, on the morning of June 8, President Clarence Wolcott in the chair. At 10:30 A.M. Mr. Wolcott opened the convention with the following address:

"I have been looking forward with eager anticipation to this third annual gathering of the American Booksellers' Association. Three years ago the bookmen of this country knew little of each other's personality except through hearsay. To-day, thanks to this organization, we are drawn closely together. No longer isolated in thoughts and purposes we are advising with each other for the betterment of our profession. Our interests are unified, new hopes kindled. Reaching out to help each other, we are joined heartily by the publishers. Our former rivals, the department stores, with few exceptions, are co-operating with us. Publishers and dealers alike are coming to realize that the profession of bookselling calls for a high order of talent, without which adequate returns for efficient service may not be realized.

"The consummation of all our hopes, as to profits, is not yet achieved. More hard work remains for us to do. The net price system must prevail everywhere. All new books should be factors contributing their full share of profit to our business. Half-hearted protection must go. A sliding scale always tends downwards.

"That we should have had opposition to contend with was natural and inevitable of course. No genuine revolution was ever accomplished without struggle and contention. It has cost our Association much time, trouble and expense to defend our position against adversaries. Something like eight hundred dollars for attorney's fees and disbursements swamped our treasury. Our worthy secretary, always standing in the breach, came to our rescue and advanced the money necessary to cover these expenses. He has given his best thought through the whole year since last we met to advance our cause. Let us not forget these things, gentlemen; and right in this connection let me say to the booksellers of the country through you that in my judgment there is little excuse for any member to refuse to join our ranks and contribute cheerfully and promptly the five dollars required yearly for membership. It is the best item of expense appearing on the yearly balance sheet. This is especially true of all who attend our meetings. It seems to me that a ten-fold return for the expenditure of the price of a box of cigars awaits the man who comes to our sessions, if for no other reason than to get ideas of how the other fellow does his work in his native place.

"This leads me to say, that in my daily routine in Syracuse I often think of the man from St. Paul, with his genial eye and sturdy methods; of the member from far away Texas, with his Southern accent and natural hospitality; of the men from Cleveland and Pittsburgh, Baltimore, Grand Rapids, Wilmington, Cincinnati, Boston and New York, all earnest, forceful, intelligent men; and these thoughts inspire new courage for the daily struggle with prices, discounts and the like.

"I greet you all heartily, gentlemen, and trust these sessions will be highly profitable to us in many, many ways.

"The skies are darkened outside, and the long expected rain which we so gladly welcome comes to freshen and restore all nature. May we, too, be brightened and invigorated by the showers of helpful discussions. With Wordsworth let us say:

"Still may a veteran few have pride
In thoughts whose sternness makes them sweet;
In fixed resolve by reason justified
That to their object cleave like sleet."

The first order of business was the reading of the following:

The secretary's report was then read.

It was moved that the secretary's report also be referred to the Auditing Committee for examination.

The president was directed to appoint a committee of five to draft resolutions. The following members were appointed to serve on this committee: Harry F. Davis, chairman, Wallace H. Cathcart, Clarence W. Sanders, T. Pillot, and B. G. Eichelberger.

The general discussion of the following questions read by the secretary then ensued:

(1) Do you favor extending the present period of protection; and if so would you maintain the net price for only two years, or during the life of copyright?

(2) Do you favor increasing the present price of protection on fiction; and if so to what extent?

Mr. Jackson suggested that the chair solicit an expression of opinion on above questions from all delegates present. The call was responded to freely.

The opinions on the first question varied, but when put to a vote those who favored to extend the time to two years were in a large majority. The consensus of opinion on the question of placing fiction on the protected net list was practically unanimous in favor of recommending that step for consideration to the American Publishers' Association. The matter was then referred to the Committee on Resolutions and the meeting adjourned until ten o'clock of the morning of Tuesday, June 9.

THE THIRD ANNUAL DINNER.

The annual dinner, owing to the loyal co-operation of the Booksellers' League and the Booksellers' Association of New York, was well attended. Nearly two hundred persons filled the large dining-room and several tables in an adjoining room. Among the guests of honor were Simon Brentano, the Rev. Thomas Dixon, Jr., Thomas Seton, E. W. Townsend and Major F. T. Leigh. After coffee had been served, Mr. Wolcott, who also presided at the dinner, on behalf of the American Booksellers' Association, presented to Mr. J. W. Nichols, the secretary, a handsome silver service. Mr. Nichols, who was visibly touched by this mark of esteem, declared himself unable to make a speech, but in a few words expressed his hearty thanks.

Mr. Simon Brentano, speaking for the Booksellers' Association of New York and the Booksellers' League, then greeted the assembly with the following:

ADDRESS OF WELCOME.

It is no less a privilege than a duty, as I perceive it, that has become mine, when I am suffered to offer on the part of the Booksellers' League and the Booksellers of New York a formal welcome to the members of the American Booksellers' Association at the outset of their present convention. Indeed, we may all be sure that all other trades allied directly or indirectly would be glad to join us in wishing that your conferences will be entirely successful, and to know that because of them there will be attained some additional and permanent improvement in the business and profession of retail bookselling.

You will discuss seriously such means of betterment that can be of direct and practical service.

To that end I offer for such thought as may be of slight service to you in your proceedings, one of the main principles that must be fought out and won before we can reconstruct and maintain in a healthy condition throughout the United States retail book-selling.

It is the question of retail price.

The selling at, and maintaining of, a fair retail price will in its finality mean either the life or death of retail bookselling as carried on in its best days and as is the hope alike of the public, the publisher and the retailer to see perpetuated.

The public is prepared to pay and will pay a fair price for a book. It is not of chief or highest consequence whether a customer pays five or ten cents more for each book, provided that the price is uniform.

This five or ten cents in question means in many businesses the difference between a profit or loss side arising from retail book-selling.

It is clear that if in the business of publishing it is intended as a permanent part and principle on the part of publishers to fix for each book a retail price and announce such retail price to the public, it is the manifest duty of the publisher to aid with every means in his power in honestly seeing to it that such prices as have been established by him shall be maintained.

Some method must be found which will allow a book to be sold at the price advertised and no other, and such a system must be inaugurated whether all books are called net books or have any other denomination. If such a policy to publishers seems inexpedient, or if publishers are unwilling or unable to attain to that point where publishers' prices will be paid by retail buyers, is it not then better to discard all published retail prices and to sell to booksellers and leave the bookseller to fix for each book such a retail price as in his judgment may seem best.

One cannot reasonably expect the publishers to be of greater service in this direction until the retail bookselling trade for and by itself will throughout the year carry in stock a larger variety of books and one more adequate to serve their respective trades. . . .

The increase in public libraries and other forms of supplying books to readers through other means than direct purchase, have seemed to limit sales; yet this need not dishearten booksellers. There is ample room for good book stores everywhere. A careful selection of stock and capable salespeople and intelligent service generally will find response in most communities.

It should be remembered that thousands of retail customers—men and women of great intellect and of cultivated taste in reading—find many book stores unequipped to give them proper service. Purchasers increase according to character and excellence of help.

Every retailer should serve his customer first. Everything else comes last, and especially last should come, if at all, any personal feeling between a retailer and publisher which causes a retailer to hesitate to put in stock as promptly and serve his customers—as he would otherwise—with any book of merit and importance, simply because of relations between a retailer and publisher, which are of no concern and of no interest to the customer.

Another thing which must be definitely taken into account before we can hope for the advancement and endurance of retail bookselling is to found a school for retail bookselling, carrying out the idea of Mr. Growell. Without such a school it does not seem possible to nurse back into the great life and strength which should surround it, the profession of retail bookselling. Furthermore, it is necessary and should be possible to reward the skilled, trained and arduous labor done by the best retail book clerk more highly than is the case now.

No problem attending the present condition of retail bookselling can be solved unless each man for himself determines to overcome obstacles and approaches every condition which seems at fault in his particular business full of hope, courage, and with that persistent determination that will conquer.

I fear I have said much in this lingering address which may have been unwelcome, and yet have failed to bid you welcome. To all guests, and especially to the out-of-town delegates, we bespeak for you the sincere hospitality of all the retail establishments of this city. We shall be glad if the delegates honor us with their visits, and we shall be pleased at such times to learn from them their experiences, and in turn be of such guidance to them in such matters as we may.

Again I express the hope for a most successful convention, that all of you may return to your businesses with better spirit and purpose after your brief absence. And, remember, if to some of us there shall be denied that great money reward which comes to merchants in other lines of business, we can be animated by having in thought what the glorious Milton said of books: "A good book is the precious life blood of a master spirit embalmed and treasured up on purpose to a life beyond life."

And with this great tribute to good books, and with the hope that as merchants we have had some little part in their distribution, I bid you all success.

The chairman introduced the first speaker of the evening, the Rev. Thomas Dixon, Jr.

Mr. Dixon said, in part: "I wish to congratulate you to-night upon this organization. I wish to congratulate you as an author. I wish to express to you my heartiest sympathy, and my faith in it and its future.

"The theme upon which I have to speak to you to-night is 'The Secret of American Power.' A distinguished critic has recently said that the American holds the centre of the stage of the world. I believe that is true. As a student of history, I believe it is true. There is a reason for this. The financial centre of the world is shifting from London to New York. The diplomatic centre is shifting to Washington.

"What is the secret of the development of the American? The secret lies first in his birthright as a free man, and second in the development of his character into the most powerful individual man the world has ever seen. It is the secret of all-powerful character." Mr. Dixon spoke at length on the subject of race prejudice dwelling specially upon the status of the negro in the South. Touching on socialism, he said in conclusion, "Socialism, to-day, is the substitution of a scullless machine for the soul of an individual."

Mr. Dixon was followed by Mr. Ernest Thompson Seton, who spoke on "The Point of View in Nature Study." Mr. Seton said that in the study of animals, as in the study of all other important subjects, the key- or guide-word is "Sympathy." He said that the old-fashioned idea was that "The animal was way down, and man, a thing of deep reason, was way up." He continued, "How absurd! We know better now. We know that man is a creature of character, instincts and a large measure of reason. The animal has the beginnings of all that man has. In other words, the difference is one of degree." In support of his statement, Mr. Seton related a number of stories of remarkable animal sagacity.

The next speaker was E. W. Townsend ("Chimmie Fadden.") His "reminiscences," jokes, and sallies kept the booksellers convulsed with laughter. His speech was most thoroughly enjoyed.

W. Millard Palmer, of Grand Rapids, Mich., next spoke on the POSSIBILITIES OF THE REFORM FROM THE BOOKSELLERS' POINT OF VIEW.

I suppose that this topic was assigned to me at this point in the programme in the hope that you probably would see the rising sun of a resurrected booktrade before I got through. I wish to assure you that I shall speak of only two or three things that particularly interest every man who is a participant in the work of publishing books, of selling books, and, particularly, of writing books.

Some three years ago a number of booksellers and publishers got together to see if something could be done to stay the decline of the bookselling trade, as well as to put it on a stable basis. In order that that might be done, The American Publishers' Association enacted what they called "Reform Resolution Number One," to place certain new publications on a net basis, to publish them at a price which should be a fixed price, from which not one cent of discount should be given by any bookseller, whether he should be a professional bookseller or a department store manager.

Now why was this done? I see before me to-night, gentlemen who have been in the bookselling business for half a century. I, myself, in my short experience in the bookselling business, remember that even twenty years ago we were in a prosperous condition. But what was the condition three years ago? It was a time to call in a coroner upon the bookselling trade. The publishers and booksellers decided to try to do something to save the trade from demoralization. The step was taken; the patient has been resuscitated; and we are now, to-night, in this great city of New York, the great financial centre of the world, at a crisis—at a crisis in the bookselling, book-producing, book-writing of America. Why?

When the reform was started, we urged upon the publishers that they should put, first of all, above everything else, novels—books of fiction—upon a net basis, and why? Because those were the trade books; because those who wished to profit by bad methods, advertised them at cut prices—not between the list and cost, but at cost, and below cost; and so we said, "It is essential that you first of all protect the price upon the novel."

Now, there were publishers and booksellers who feared that if the radical step of placing bookselling upon a net basis were taken it could not be accomplished. The publishers decided to put the net price upon other classes of literature—upon history, upon biography, travel, theology, and other lines. Did that accomplish any good? It accomplished one thing. It demonstrated to the booksellers of America that they could do that which they were fearful they could not accomplish; that a price could be placed upon a book, on a copyrighted book, and that that price could be maintained, in New York, in San Francisco, in New Orleans, in any place in the United States. It demonstrated that the publisher can put a price upon a book and have it maintained. If he can do it on a book of travel, he can do it on a book of fiction.

The crisis is this: I believe that to-morrow, in convention assembled, the American Booksellers' Association representing six hundred booksellers of the United States of America, (there used to be three thousand,) will enact resolutions requesting the publishers to place fiction upon a net basis. If this is done, the profession of bookselling will again be placed upon a dignified and profitable basis. If it is not done—I wish to emphasize it; I say it with due respect to the American Publishers' Association, and to every member therein—if it is not done, you publishers, you authors, as well as we booksellers will live to rue the day. Let it be distinctly understood that the fact having been demonstrated that the price can be maintained, every book that is published can be placed upon the net list. And the sooner every bookseller gets from his mind the idea that he must give a single cent of discount, the earlier you will see the trade upon a safe and profitable basis. . . .

Only yesterday, on the train coming from the West, I clipped this London item from The Chicago Record Herald:

"Referring to the new movement to which I alluded last week for an improvement in the dispersal of literature in this country, the Bookshops Company has now established itself at 34 Norfolk Strand. Writing from there Frederick Whelan says that the new bookshops will endeavor to provide that stimulus for readers which the German system has proved to be so useful in Germany. In a lecture delivered by William Heinemann before the Associated Booksellers of Great Britain he said: 'The local bookseller in Germany, particularly in the smaller towns, has an establishment which every educated person in the place visits from time to time. On the arrival of the Leipsic parcel he inspects the newest publications and sees them within a few days of their issuing from the publishers. He is thus able to handle them, examine them and select from them.'"

And that day shall come in this country! We who have been struggling up the height on this side will from the top view the promised land on the other side.

A. Growoll, managing editor of THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY, then delivered the following address on

THE BENEFITS OF TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Whatever tends to dignify the ancient and honorable business of the bookseller touches my heart. It has been my privilege, as man and boy, to witness the vast development of the American booktrade for nearly half a century, during a large part of which time I have been more or less directly identified with the making and the sale of books. Indeed, I may say that I have been associated with every department of the publishing and bookselling business—printing and binding books, publishing and selling them, and even writing some—for which there has been a limited demand. Then, as you know, I have written about books, and have endeavored, in an humble way, to act as a pathfinder for many of you in your search after unknown or little known books. But before I cultivated any of these gentle arts I cultivated the habit of buying books, and I am able to testify that my digressions in that direction brought me many times into contact with a race of men whom it was an honor to know; men who seemed to feel that in placing a good book in the hands of a reader they were more than traffickers, more than dealers in merchandise; that they were wighted with the responsibilities, and dowered with the privileges, of the educator, who seeks to make the world wiser and better by the diffusion of useful knowledge.

A cursory view of the great progress of the nation, especially during the last three decades, conclusively shows that the business of publishing and selling books has not as fully shared as it might have done in that marvellous development. In saying this I do not overlook the enormous and wonderful increase in the production of text-books and works of reference, nor the amazing consumption of what may be termed "light literature," or the increasing and now amazing issues of the periodical press. Neither am I unmindful of the great increase of publications in the departments of miscellaneous literature; and yet the fact remains that relatively, considering the increase in population and of the purchasing ability, the great body of our American people to-day give comparatively little encouragement to the American author, the American publisher and bookseller, in their all-important work of developing an American literature.

Consider for a moment what has been done during the last thirty years in rearing and maintaining the college, the seminary, the grammar and the common school; consider, also, the enlargement of the public library system, and the wide expansion along all other educational lines; and then remember how comparatively few people of a refined intelligence, while adorning their homes with all the fads and fancies of the decorative art to set off elegant and luxurious furnishings, make no provision whatever for the bookcase and the book! Take any one of our larger towns and cities, and you will find a score, more or less, of flourishing establishments packed to the full with costly woods and fabrics set in luxurious frames and shimmering in all the dazzling lights of high decorative art; and yet in the town or city where you will readily find all these the business places which minister to the higher wants are languishing for proper support, and many of our trade have therefore been obliged to keep up a constant fight to make both ends meet! I am no pessimist, but I know that no city, for its own sake, can afford to be without such an educational centre as yours, where men can go and keep themselves in touch with the intellectual movements of the time; that no home, however rich the owner or how elegant and luxurious its furnishings, can be in the best sense a home where no provision is made for the intellectual wants. The newspaper and the magazine will not supply this want. The paper novel cannot do it. It is only the book—the good book, in the truest sense—that can prevent a sordid, heavy atmosphere from settling down upon such a habitation.

But let us not be too hard on the leisure class. An educator placed by Providence in the centre of a population, either great or small, must not only make himself felt by the very powers within him, but himself must possess a keen sense of his own responsibility to his friends and neighbors. In order to accomplish this he must be a man conscious alike to his opportunity and duty. He must not sit in an easy chair and wait until he is recognized as an educator. He must first recognize himself; then insist that what he has to give he is prepared to give there and now. He must stand on his calling, not with a supercilious conceit, but with an intelligent and persistent earnestness that will command respect and win success, according to the measure of his individual ability. I hold and ever have held that the bookseller is an educator; but an educator who has never been recognized as he deserved; and the question I now put to you is, Whose fault is it? Is it the fault of the public, or is the fault all his own that he has come largely to be classed as a mere dealer of merchandise, rather than as an essential factor in the great educational movement of our times?

As an evidence of a disposition on the part of the American bookseller to place himself upon his proper level, we all hailed with delight the formation of this association. There was need for organization so long as we did not overlook the rights and duties of the individual, so long as we bore in mind the fact that the interests of the publisher and the bookseller must be identical, if both would enjoy health and prosperity.

The publisher must use you as his distributing agent. He cannot reach directly the public of this continent, for while he can make a book for a reader in California, he must use the bookseller to place the book in his hand; and is it not common sense, is it not in the interest of all good fellowship, is it not a good principle in business, that the publisher should remember that the bookseller is his agent, indispensable to his success, and that the publisher should not only stand by the bookseller, but make the bookseller's interest his interest by seeing to it that all the bookseller's rights are maintained—in a word, the publisher should use and not abuse the bookseller. The fact that this was often overlooked formed a reason, and a sufficient reason, for an organization like this, which by its scope and power would compel a redress not only of all present wrongs, but the establishment of all just rights, and at the same time lift your business to its old-time dignity, and keep it before the public in every city, and town, and village, that the bookstore is an educational institution; one as indispensable, according to its measure, as a school or college, yet placing no tax upon the town or State for its support, and demand from the individual buyer only a reasonable mercantile profit on its sales, which profit would after all represent only a fair wage for an honest day's work.

The relations between publisher and bookseller should be a mutual one. But, gentlemen, you must see to it, as the publisher must see to it, that practically the interest be one. The publisher cannot help you unless you will help yourselves. Heretofore the two interests were drawing apart. This was not wholly the fault of either side. What was wanted was that the tendency should be the other way. It will take time to establish this principle, but it can be done; in fact, a surprisingly large share of the work has already been accomplished through the two organizations so recently called into existence.

As you know there have been booktrade organizations before this. There have been booktrade organizations as a matter of fact since the formation of the Boston Association of Booksellers in 1794. None of these survived very long. And why did they die? Perhaps it was because their members did not keep full faith with each other; or they built too largely on a purely mercantile or selfish ground; or because some of its members came to look upon it as an organization that might possibly put a little more money in the individual purse, and so the short candle went out.

As that sturdy champion of booktrade reform, the late Mr. Anson D. F. Randolph, to whom I am indebted for much of the inspiration of my address once said on a similar occasion: "No movement for reform can live or flourish if there be not woven in its fibre something more than the symbol of a dollar. There must be connected with it a sentiment to induce; an unselfish motive to attract; a living purpose to confirm and hold. A reform so established will in time work out not only pecuniary benefits, but produce still larger results for the betterment of society, in the building up and broadening of the individual character. Even in these days of fierce competition and broad materialism the old trade proverb, 'every man for himself,' does not go unchallenged. The world is not as selfish as it was of old; so that while standing for one's rights there is a growing disposition to recognize the rights of others. I put it as an axiom, that the man in trade who, without being unjust to himself, seeks always to be just to his neighbor, is the man in the long run who, having the same measure of ability, will win the most and hold the longest."

Now, in this organization of our honored trade, if it would enjoy the largest measure of success, the element of pure individual selfishness must be eliminated. The bookseller in the town and the publisher in the city must be true to his neighbor as to himself. Bear in mind that we are not dealers in mere merchandise; that we are educators, each governed by a proper spirit of enterprise and industry, and that if one be favored with a larger success than the other, it is not to be the result of overreaching or underreaching, but rather to a broader intelligence, a clearer recognition of the laws that govern trade, an alert industry, and a quickened apprehension that has made two blades of grass to grow where only one grew before.

Major F. T. Leigh, of Harper & Brothers, being called upon for a few remarks, said: "It is a great pleasure to be here this evening. I have been uplifted, entertained, and amused by some of the speakers, and exceedingly interested by others. I have been especially interested by those speakers who have touched and dwelt upon trade topics.

"The principle underlying the statements of our friend, Mr. Growoll, is one that I sincerely believe in. The publisher must rely upon his good friends, customers and associates—the booksellers—for the distribution of the property which he distributes on behalf of the author. Of course, I am not authorized in any way to speak for any of them, but I know we shall await with great interest the result of your deliberations.

"As a publisher whose station is in this city, I am glad that it has been my good fortune to have been at this dinner. I am glad your Association has been so prosperous. I am glad that the problems of the trade have been approached with so much conservatism and intelligence."

Horace H. Jackson, of Bridgeport, Conn., closed the evening with the following remarks: "I little thought, Mr. President, and members of this Association, as I stood tonight in the hotel door, a few blocks up, that I should have occasion to use the words I saw across the street. The words are as follows: 'An All Star Stock Company.' I dwelt upon those words for two or three minutes, and I began to think, 'That means that every one whose name is upon the programme is a star, a star of unlimited magnitude.' When I came up here, and picked up this menu I said, 'Surely, here are repeated the words I saw on Broadway, 'An All Star Stock Company.'"

"When I was a lad, I went to work in a bookstore. I didn't understand much about books; but it was in the days when the publisher had wooed the bookseller, and they were united. They were living peacefully together. Each recognized the other's function, his worth, his merit, his dependence on the other. And then came a time—about '80—when there came into the family high words, misunderstandings, and the members of the family became estranged, as you often see it reflected in the domestic circle. For almost twenty years they were in that condition. About three years ago, by the cement of kind words and gentle influences they were brought a bit closer. They have gone on successfully and kindly for three years. They each recognize that they made a mistake in the years gone by. They want a closer union, and I believe we find it to-day in such meetings as this."

The hands of the clock pointed almost to midnight when Mr. Wolcott closed the banquet with these words: "In the name of the American Booksellers' Association, I bid you all good night."

The report of the Committee on Nominations was adopted as read.

A Committee on Audit was then appointed to examine the treasurer's report.

The following resolutions were submitted by the Committee on Resolutions:

WHEREAS, The net price system has been in successful operation for more than two years, and

WHEREAS, It has been demonstrated that a net price can be maintained on copyrighted books, and

WHEREAS, We feel assured that the American Publishers' Association is in perfect sympathy with our efforts to place the book business upon a profitable basis, now therefore be it

Resolved, That the cutting of prices on books of fiction and the inability to realize thereon a living profit, has been the evil most disastrous to the book-selling trade; and as the protection now existing affords an adequate profit to the bookseller and admits of a scale of varying and unsatisfactory prices, we earnestly request the American Publishers' Association immediately to place all fiction on the net list.

Resolved, That since it has been demonstrated that the prices of many strong books are cut just at the height of their sale by reason of the fact that the period of protection is for only one year; and while it is our earnest conviction that the period of protection should ultimately be made to cover the life of the copyright, we earnestly request that immediate action be taken to maintain the net price for not less than two years.

Resolved, That we endorse the attitude of the American Publishers' Association in declining in 1902 to increase the discount on net books to libraries, and we do hereby again renew our expression that if any change is made in the rates to libraries, it should be in the direction of decreasing the discount, and as soon as possible, selling all books to libraries at the full net list as is done under the English system.

Resolved, That as we recognized at the beginning of this reform movement that the interests of the department stores operating book departments are identical with the interests of professional booksellers, and as a vast majority of the department stores of the country have been giving the reform movement cordial and hearty support, we renew our invitation to all department stores operating regular and permanent book departments, and who are not already members, to join the American Booksellers' Association and thereby aid us in our efforts and share in all benefits achieved.

Resolved, That the American Publishers' Association be requested to rule that the giving with a net book or the acceptance in part payment thereof, any premium, whether it be a trading stamp or any other article, be considered a discount from the net price and an infringement of the rules governing the sale of net books.

WHEREAS, A methodical investigation of the expense of doing a retail book business shows that the proportion of expenses to gross sales was an average of fully 25 %, without including any interest on the capital invested, and

WHEREAS, The present discount of 25 % generally allowed by publishers on net books yields a profit that is totally inadequate, therefore be it

Resolved, That we earnestly request and urge the American Publishers' Association to recommend to its members that the discount on net books be not less than 33 1/3 %.

Resolved, That the Secretary of this Association be instructed to submit the foregoing resolutions to all members of the American Booksellers' Association for their ratification.

Upon motion each resolution was discussed separately.

Upon further motion the resolutions submitted by the Committee on Resolutions were adopted as read.

It was then moved and carried that a Committee of Five be appointed to present the foregoing resolutions to the American Publishers' Association.

A discussion followed with reference to the payment of the deficits of the Association. It was moved that the secretary be requested to have lists of active booksellers in all localities throughout the country sent to representatives of the American Booksellers' Association in these localities, so that they might see the booksellers and induce them to pay their dues, and to join the American Booksellers' Association if not already a member.

Resolutions were then presented and adopted thanking the management of the Gilsey House for courtesies extended to the Association and its members; to the officers of the Association, and to the young ladies who volunteered their services as stenographers; to the Committee on Entertainment and Dinner; and to Doubleday, Page & Co., for their courtesy in presenting to each member as a souvenir of the occasion an inscribed copy of Simeon Ford's new book, "A Few Remarks."

The question of where the next convention should be held was left open; but a motion was made and carried that the Executive Committee be made acquainted with the fact that it was considered desirable to select a meeting place in the Middle West for the next annual convention.

THE STATIONERS' COMPANY 500TH ANNIVERSARY.

THE 500th anniversary of the Stationers' Company was celebrated with a banquet on June 10, at which the guest of the evening was the Archbishop of Canterbury, who, according to the London Stationery Trade Journal, "at one time was substantially concerned with the censorship of the press, and who is still presented by the company with a set of almanacs every year. The company, or at any rate a parent association, in all probability existed long before 1403. Originally it consisted of a fellowship of text writers, and its work was confined to the preparation of deeds, indentures and legal documents, to undo men, as Jack Cade put it. In course of time this fellowship was divided into two branches. One, called the Scriveners, applied itself to the dark work alluded to, work, indeed, from which their name was derived, and the other called the Stationers, undertook the humaner arts of writing, binding, and selling books. The capital for the publishing business, which is carried on to this day, was subscribed by the members in various proportions, and the profits were divided on that basis. It was known as partners' stock. At first there were several of these stocks, but in 1601 they were merged into one whole. The capital now represents a sum of about £42,000.

"The copyright register was established by the company at the beginning of the sixteenth century, and in 1662 a bill was passed in Parliament requiring all copies of printed works to be registered at Stationers' Hall; and this was confirmed in 1842 by an act which makes the registry a sine qua non of the title to sue for protection. The hall of the company was burnt down in the great fire, after which the site was cleared, and the present building erected."

BOOKS PUBLISHED AS PERIODICALS NOT SECOND-CLASS MAIL MATTER.

THE long-standing contention of the Post-Office Department that novels and other writings published in the form of periodicals were not entitled to the use of the mails at second-class rates, like newspapers and magazines, was sustained by the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia on June 5.

The decision was in the test cases of Houghton, Mifflin & Co., of Boston, publishers of the Riverside Literature Series, and the Bates & Guild Co., of Boston, publishers of "Masters in Music." The Riverside Literature Series had been issued for many years, and had been accepted by previous Post-masters-General as mail matter of the second class.

The judgment of the Court of Appeals sweeps away the contention that the Post-master-General is bound by any decision of his predecessors in accepting matter under a wrong classification, and restores to him the authority which he has all along been allowed to exercise without question, until the reform in the second-class mail matter was undertaken, when the courts were invoked to prevent him. The decision leaves him free to classify the mail matter according to his judgment and discretion as to the true meaning of the law.

The court held that a book or set of books cannot be converted into a periodical publication by the publisher in inventing a serial name or a literary title and numbering the books consecutively.

FACTS ABOUT DICTIONARIES.

DR. J. A. H. MURRAY, editor of the "New English Dictionary," told his hearers a great many interesting things about dictionaries in the course of a recent lecture at the Royal Institution. The word dictionary, he said, appeared first in 1225, and, though "dictionary" was used in its modern sense in 1542, it had not then ousted either the more correct word "vocabulary" or the fanciful titles which early compilers liked to employ. The contents of the earliest dictionaries were not arranged in alphabetical order, but under subject headings; it is only since the end of the sixteenth century that the alphabetical arrangement has become universal in Europe—an arrangement which is responsible for the wrongful application of the title "dictionary" to any work treating of subjects—e.g., cabinet-making or national biography—in alphabetical order. A dictionary is properly a book about words.

The average person seems somehow to think of dictionaries as the invention of Dr. Johnson, and an altogether modern product. Dr. Murray corrected that idea. They were not the work of one or of several men, he told his audience, but a growth developed through ages. They began with the glosses—that is, the explanations in easy Latin or English—of hard Latin words, written by the monks between the lines of the manuscripts. The glosses grew into translations, and collections of glosses by this monk or that from all the sources available to him made glossaries or dictionaries. Little by little English supplanted the easy Latin explanations, and the words were arranged in a rudimentary alphabetical order, thus forming, so long ago as 1000 A.D., Latin-English dictionaries. The uneducated Normans overthrew English learning, and it was not till the fifteenth century that the revival came.

The first book with the title of "An English Dictionary" was published in 1623. These works were mainly compiled for the use of "women and other unskilful persons." In the year 1721 appeared the first attempt at a complete dictionary of the English language, remarkable also for the introduction of the etymological treatment of words—that of Nathaniel Bailey. His folio edition, published in 1730, was the working basis of Dr. Johnson's Dictionary. In the reign of Anne—an age of rest and subsidence from troubles—when the language had reached maturity, the demand arose for a standard dictionary which should fix forever (a childlike and pathetic aim) the correct usage. Pope interested himself in the plan. It fell to Johnson to execute it, at a cost of time, labor and money that far exceeded the original calculations of himself or his syndicate of booksellers. The specially new feature of the work was the quotations, all gathered by Johnson himself, and copied by six assistants. They were printed without verification or reference, and the proofs were not carefully read, hence many curious errors.

THE VALUE OF A DEAD HERO.

THE old rule for story telling used to be that, whatever happened and however great the carnage, the hero should come out with his life. But the spirit of commercialism now points out a new way. A dead hero, especially if he is a beloved detective, is worth far more than a live one, at least according to recent reports concerning a new book by A. Conan Doyle. Dr. Doyle has dug up the dead "Sherlock Holmes," and is going to get a good price for him—much more, indeed, than he was ever able to get for "Sherlock" before he killed him. The rumor declares that for twelve stories of about 9000 words each Dr. Doyle was to be paid $108,000, which would make the author's "ifs" and "ands," "thes" and "buts" worth almost $1 apiece. There will probably be only eight stories, according to a later account, but the rate will be the same. After these notable tales have appeared in serial form, they will be published as a book by McClure, Phillips & Company.

COMMUNICATIONS.

SHONFELD IS STILL IN THE BOOK BUSINESS.

To the Editor of The Publishers' Weekly.

DEAR SIR: Please correct the erroneous impression that I have disposed of my book business, or entered into partnership with anyone. I am still at my old stand, carrying on the second-hand book business, as I have done for the past twenty-six years in this town—with this exception, that I have discontinued dealing in school books, Government reports, old magazines, paper novels, theological books, etc.—which profitable articles I did dispose of—devoting my time and energy to rare and imported works.

COPYRIGHT MATTERS.

JUDGE TONEY SEEKS TO RESTRAIN PUBLICATION OF "HUGHES ON CONTRACTS."

JUDGE STIRLING B. TONEY, of Louisville, Ky., has brought suit against William T. Hughes, of Colorado, and Callaghan & Co., of Chicago, to restrain them from further publishing a book entitled "Hughes on Contracts" or: the following grounds:

In 1901 Judge Toney's son, then twenty-one years of age, was a student in the law department at the University of Colorado at Boulder. To help the young man in his studies, his father, who for eighteen years has been chancellor of the circuit court of Jefferson County, Ky., prepared a series of private notes on the law of contract. These notes were based on the judge's long experience as a lawyer and jurist, and were sent to the son at short intervals, in the form of letters.

In the following summer young Toney formed the acquaintance of William T. Hughes, who was a lawyer of Boulder. Hughes learned of the existence of the letters of the judge, and requested that he be allowed to read them. The request was granted, and, it is said, Hughes kept the letters the greater part of the year.

Several months ago when a new legal work was issued from the press of Callaghan & Co., entitled "Hughes on Contracts," a copy fell into the hands of Judge Toney, and he was surprised to find that his letters to his son had been reproduced.

Judge Toney says he wrote to Hughes asking whether he had caused the borrowed notes to be published, and that Hughes replied in the affirmative. Judge Toney believes a large edition of the work has been published, and asks that a statement of the profits be submitted to the court, and that an injunction be issued restraining Callaghan & Co. from further publication of the book.

JUDGE DECLINES TO STOP PUBLICATION OF "LETTERS OF A SON TO HIS SELF-MADE FATHER."

JUSTICE MORTON, of the Massachusetts Supreme Court on June 5 dismissed without prejudice a bill praying for an injunction restraining the publishers of the Boston Herald from publishing the "Letters of a Son to His Self-Made Father." George H. Lorimer, of the Philadelphia Saturday Evening Post, the author of the "Letters of a Self-Made Merchant to His Son," was the petitioner. He averred that the publication of these letters as advertised was an injury to him as an author. The "Letters of a Son to His Self-Made Father" were written under the pseudonym of Charles Euston Merriman by George Tilton Richardson and Wilder Dwight Quint, of the Boston Evening Traveller, who under the pseudonym of Dwight Tilton wrote "Miss Petticoats" and "On Satan's Mount." It was the contention of the plaintiff that the purpose of the articles was to trade upon the popularity of Mr. Lorimer's work rather than upon the literary reputations of the authors themselves, accomplished by using a hitherto unused pseudonym which people might think had been taken by Mr. Lorimer. Mr. Quint said that no such purpose was in the minds of the authors when they wrote. He declared that the idea of writing the letters came to him when he read Mr. Lorimer's book. He saw an opportunity of reversing the philosophy and thought it would be fun to do so. He worked on it with Mr. Richardson and they sold the product to Henry G. Pagani, who arranged for the publication in the Boston Herald. After counsel had submitted arguments Justice Morton, in dismissing the bill, said that the publication could not be stopped; that the advertisements do not represent that these are the letters of Mr. Lorimer; that the public cannot be deceived by them and evidently is not deceived; and that if the plaintiff has any claim it is a claim at law. He therefore dismissed the bill without prejudice.

OBITUARY NOTES.

HENRY ROMEIKE, who started the first press clipping bureau, by means of which his name became familiar in many countries, died suddenly June 3, at his home in New York City. Mr. Romeike was born in Riga, Russia, November 10, 1855, and was educated at Memel, Eastern Prussia. It was in Paris in the eighties that he conceived the idea of a press clipping bureau, on a plan that had been matured years earlier by Mr. Frederick Leyboldt, but put into practice on only one line, namely, that of press notices of new books. Samuel Leavitt in 1884 started his first American agency in New York, which in 1887 was taken over by Mr. Romeike himself and conducted by him up to the time of his death.

FLEMING H. REVELL COMPANY have just ready a story by the Rev. Dr. George Claude Lorimer, entitled "The Master of Millions," which is described as a "drama of modern civilization." The author has written this story after years spent in collecting material, and out of a life time crowded with experience.

D. APPLETON & Co. have in preparation a translation of Bismarck's letters to his wife, written in 1870 and 1871. There are between seventy and eighty long and short letters and telegrams, which cover the whole period of the war, from the day when Bismarck left for the front until his return, the last being written from Versailles on March 5, 1871.

DODD, MEAD & Co. will publish in the autumn "Eighty Years of Union," a new volume by James Schouler, author of a Constitutional history of the United States, besides numerous studies in political and State constitutional history. The new book will cover the period from the adoption of the Constitution to the close of the war between the States.

THE MACMILLAN COMPANY, who issue the "Dictionary of National Biography" in this country, have just brought out the "Index and Epitome" of the dictionary, which makes the sixty-seventh volume of the set. It contains in condensed form every article included in the preceding volumes, giving the leading facts and dates about each man and woman. The volume contains 1450 pages, and its aim is to make the bare facts and dates as ready as possible for reference. Aside from being an index and epitome of the preceding sixty-six volumes, it is complete in itself.

O. A. KIRKLAND, auctioneer, 104 Law Building, Baltimore, Md., will offer for sale at auction, on June 22, at 8 P.M., and each following evening until sold, the extensive library of the late Dr. William H. Crum, at the residence of the family, No. 413 West Fayette Street. The library is specially rich in art publication and extra-illustrated books, in limited and special editions, works in sets, etc. Among some of the rare items are Audubon's "Birds and Quadrupeds of America," Cassin's "Birds," Schoolcraft's "Indians," and McKenney and Hall's "Indians." There is also a large standard library of medical works, rare autographs, a fine collection of coins and medals, and old furniture.

GINN & Co. have added to the International Library, published for the International Union, William Ellery Channing's "Discourses of War." Channing's services in the cause of peace and better international relations were conspicuous. He was one of the founders of the Massachusetts Peace Society, which was the first influential peace society in the world, and an earnest worker for the cause during his whole life. Among all men in the American pulpit, perhaps none ever waged such strenuous war against war and the military spirit among nations. This volume, like its predecessors, Bloch's "Future of War" and Sumner's "Addresses on War," is edited by Edwin D. Mead.

WILLIAM DOXEY, whose Lark Classics were so well and widely known, has lately left New York, and has assumed charge of the retail department of the reorganized Cushing Company in Baltimore. For many years he had one of the best bookstores in San Francisco, and it was there that he published The Lark, the "Purple Cow," and other things which have since become famous. Two years ago Mr. Doxey moved his entire plant to New York, and a short while ago disposed of his publishing business to Godfrey A. S. Wieners, by whom it is being continued and considerably augmented. Mr. Doxey is one of the best posted men in the book business, and has the good wishes of every one with whom he has come in personal contact.

HARPER & BROTHERS have in preparation "Flodden Field," the new three-act tragedy, by Alfred Austin, England's Poet Laureate, that was brought out on the London stage this week. They will also bring out in the autumn an important volume by W. St. Chad Boscawen, entitled "The First of the Emperors: Babylon of the Bible." It will deal with the subject in the light of the latest research, treating of the growth of the old Babylonian Empire, its civilization and culture, from the earliest ages, that is to say, some 5000 years before the Christian era, until the final consolidation about 2200 B.C. Important discoveries of prehistoric and early historic remains at Susa by J. de Morgan, and at Nippur and Tello by American and French explorers, will be fully discussed; also, the laws of Hammurabi, which will be compared with the Hebrew law and covenant. The book will be illustrated by more than 100 photographs of monuments, ruins and inscriptions, and two maps.

A Key to Books in Print

In the 1902 PUBLISHERS' TRADE LIST ANNUAL

the books of the 246 publishers who contributed the lists bound up in alphabetical order in the Catalogues volume, are indexed, by author, title and subject catchword, furnishing, by means of 140,000 entries, ready reference to the books of the leading publishers in print on July 1, 1902, and to forthcoming books of which they could furnish information in August. The Index volume and the Catalogues volume of

will be found the most useful, as well as the least expensive, single book trade reference work yet issued, especially for the booksellers and small libraries who cannot afford to buy many trade tools. Price, $2 for the Catalogues volume and $5 for the Index volume, separate, or $7 together, absolutely net.

The Catalogues volume is a huge octavo, probably the largest volume now issued, reaching, with 1902, 5700 pages, being 8¼ inches in thickness and weighing 20 pounds. Directions for enclosure delivery in New York should accompany the order, unless shipment is to be by express at the charge of the subscriber.

The Index volume, an octavo of 1114 pages, will be sent on approval to any bookseller or library enclosing 10 cents for partial postage. Of the Catalogues volume less than 300 remain unsubscribed, and the edition of the Index volume is also limited. Address, PUBLISHERS are gradually realizing the importance of two vital facts, especially when contemplating having large editions bound.

FIRST—To have their books bound in the best possible manner.

SECOND—To save enough money thereon as will guarantee an enormous annual extra dividend.

You are certainly not averse to making money. Ask me to submit samples and estimates. You will then follow the lead of some of the best publishing houses who find it profitable to give me their work.

CUMULATED

THE ANNUAL AMERICAN CATALOGUE, Cumulated, 1900-1902, includes in one alphabet the short-title lists of the books of 1900, 1901 and 1902, giving information of the books recorded by author, title, subject and series. This cumulation, which is to continue annually until a five-yearly volume of "The American Catalogue" in its new shape is reached, has been generally accepted as a desirable, practical working tool for the trade, supplementing as it will do, from year to year, the last issue of the five-yearly "American Catalogue," without the need of consulting several alphabets in several volumes.

THE AMERICAN CATALOGUE of books in print and for sale July 1, 1876, compiled under the direction of F. LEYFOLDT, and its supplements, 1876-84, 1884-90, 1890-95, and 1895-1900, compiled under the editorial direction of R. R. BOWKER, aims to present all the bibliographical features of the books in the American market, arranged in the first part alphabetically by both authors and titles, and in the second part alphabetically by subjects.

The Catalogue and its supplementary volumes form the only approximately complete guide in existence to the American books of the day, so arranged as to make reference easy from whatever direction the inquiry may come, whether from that of the author, or the title, or the subject. It not only furnishes the desired information about any particular book of which the consumer is in search, but shows what others there are by the same author or on the same subject in which he is interested. To the bookseller, therefore, it is valuable both in filling orders and in stimulating business; to the librarian, in supplying gaps and proportioning his collection; and to all who are practically concerned with books, in furnishing information by a convenient method.

The author-and-title volume of the 1876 volume is out of print. A limited number of the subject volume may be had in half leather binding at $15.

The volumes covering the periods 1876-84 and 1884-90 are also out of print.
